

Washi Tape Projects

By: Jessica Margenau, Senior Marketing Specialist for Goodwill

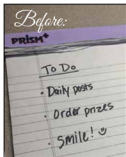

Give your school supplies a little pizzazz!

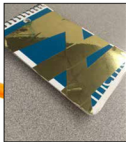

I honestly never knew how Washi tape got its name. After doing a little research, I learned that Washi tape originates in Japan as it's often made using the bark of trees that are native to Japan. Pretty neat if I do say so myself! Washi tape tends to resemble the texture of masking tape, and is equally as sturdy. That's one of the reasons it has become so popular with crafts. The other reason... it's just so pretty!

Head back to school in style by adding your own personal touch to your supplies, with Washi tape! Using school supplies from Goodwill, and a few strips of tape that you've selected, you'll have one-of-a-kind supplies to help you stand out at school. You'll find Washi tape in a variety of patterns, colors and sizes at your local craft store.

I added some Washi tape to several of my office supplies, and love the look of it!

Notepads and to-do lists are not usually at the top of my "exciting" list (especially when the to-do list has a lot on it!). I added some metallic gold Washi tape and a stripe of metallic snakeskin tape to the top of my notepad, to add a little something special. It was quick, easy and looks much nicer now!

I found these small memo pads at my local Goodwill. At $0.99 for a 3-pack, I was pretty excited to snag that deal! I like to have these small memo pads around my desk to save little reminders on, and have easy access to any other notes I need on-hand. I added my gold and snakeskin Washi tape to the cover of each pad to make them stand out!
